How I stay positive during Corona crisis

We are all now facing the situation like never before. Everyone in each own or similar way. The whole world is on the lockdown while the medical and essential workers are on the frontlines handling with the challenges brought by the newly emerged Covid-19 virus.

My name is Madina and I am a 2nd year Graduate student living in Chiba, Japan. With the outbreak of Corona virus in Tokyo my university classes were stopped. As the response to the new Covid-19 virus the distance learning system will be the main course of studying until the situation stabilizes and we can safely return to classes held in University.

With the declaration of the emergency state in Japan most of the time I spend by myself. I try to spend the time I got at home effectively and productively by doing my research readings and keeping physical activity through yoga practices. Nevertheless, doing UNISEC intemship at home me and my colleagues are in close contact working and supporting each other through smiles and laugh. While working on the translation of UNISEC-Global “Guiding Principles” I had a chance to see how UNISEC people around the globe worked and helped each other. Even though we have not met each other, through UNISEC we were able to work as a team and contribute to a common mission.

In pandemic times like this we need to keep the new rules like social-distancing, but do not forget that we still need to stay together.

How I stay positive during Corona crisis

As Theophrastus said: “Time is the most valuable thing a man can spend.”

During the unusual circumstances hampering the big wheel of the world. People are set in lockdowns for an unknown period because of the widespread of Covid-19 virus. However, many heroes like doctors and policemen, are sacrificing their lives to pave our way into security.

My name is Thameur from Sousse, Tunisia. I’m a 2nd year PhD student working with the Center for Research in Microelectronics and Nanotechnology (CRMN). Due to this epidemic, social distancing is a mandatory procedure for our safety. As a consequence, all universities were closed till the end of the crisis.

Personally, the outbreak of this virus turned out to be a blessing in disguise.

In fact, I started to adjust my lifestyle by setting up new challenges to adapt with the unexpected situation. Academically, I spend most of my time on reading books, learning new programming skills, attending webinars, whereas all of these things have engaged to improve my intellectual skills and reorganizing one’s life in addition to sports in daily practice. Nonetheless, being part of UNISEC organization brought me the way to be more connected with people globally. At a glance, it is a great occasion to share and discuss different thoughts and ideas from scientific and cultural side.

Social distancing has made us away from each other as a necessary procedure during this epidemic. However, our instinctive behavior to struggle and sustain such situations, proved that we need all to be united and work together as one to dock into safety.
